One man can go by a lot of names: Da-da, Dad, Father, Pop. In this book of more than fifty true stories, you'll meet fathers of all different types: the dad who throws the ball, the one who teaches dancing, the homework helper, the chef who cooks dinner. You'll be amazed at the variety of activities that encompass the word "father." But each man has one thing in common: He's touched his children in a way that makes him unforgettable. Whether it's a lesson learned the hard way, an unexpected kindness or a simple moment together, each man has left a legacy of love. There are stories, too, of men who learned to be fathers by on-the-job training. The look on a child's face or a crayon drawing reminded these dads that sometimes the most important action one can do is spend time. These inspiring stories celebrate those men in your life--dads, grandfathers, stepdads--who make a difference and have secured a place in your heart.
